EVENING TRANSCRIPT.

TUESDAY EVENING, NOV 14.

THE RUSSIAN IMPERIAL GUARDS. An article in the United Service Journal, of England, contains a very interesting account of the force and condition of the Russian army, the different bodies of troops, and the peculiar treatment to which they are subjected, together with numerous strictures on the despotic character of the Imperial Family, which ought to make an Englishman or an American rejoice that he lives under a less arbitrary government. The whole communication is of an instructive nature, but, too long for our limits. The following refers to the Imperial Guard, which, says the writer of the article, "when seen for the first time at a review, strike the beholder almost with awe, who, though he may have seen many finer regiments, can have witnessed nowhere in the world so large a body of fine looking troops together."

The Imperial Guard, which has always been the hobby of the Russian sovereigns, and is so peculiarly of the present Emperor, Nicholas, and of his brother, Michael, consists of 41,000 Infantry and Artillery, and of about 11,000 Cavalry, and, with the addition of the regiments of the Young Guard, does not fall short of 85,000 men. This force is stationed in the government of St Petersburgh, principally in and about the capital, and is under the command of the Grand Duke Michael. The Guards, the picked men from the whole army, are all either 5 feet 11 inches in height, or exceeding that stature. On first view an observer is struck to find them all dark, and bearing to each other as remarkable a similitude as the sheep of a flock. When his eye wanders over thousands of faces, he cannot readily point out one who might not pass for the brother of the one most dissimilar to him—and they seem as if nature had moulded them all by ukase according to a given pattern—and the precission and uniformity of their attitude and equipment, make one man look the reflection of the one beside him. This similitude of personal appearance he afterwards finds to be much owing to their general dusky and sallow complexions (probably produced by the excessive warmth of the artificial atmosphere in which they live, and the abuse of the steam-bath,) as well as to the black moustache, of exactly the same cut and trim, and which, whatever its original color, receives the same dark gloss by being annointed and plastered with an unctuous compound, something similar to our English cart-grease. This is applied by order. An "ukase" also fixes the length of a soldier's or an officer's hair at a finger's width, and determines on which side it must be brushed, and how low the whiskers may be allowed to invade the cheek. These orders are the same for the General as for the drummer. As long as we see these soldiers of the Guards embodied, they are very imposing. High of stature—of martial, though rigidly stiff carriage—they are clad in tasteful uniforms, of which the materials, though coarse, have been fashioned with all the skill of art, and fitted to each man individually; they are worthy of having come from the hands of the late King of Prussia, of whom the Emperor Alexander said, that Fortune had spoiled an admirable master-tailor in giving him his crown.

There is one effect, however, strikingly ludicrous in the attempt to improve the figures of both soldiers and officers—their trousers are tightened so much by a band at the waist that the stomach protrudes most ungracefully, particularly in the soldier, who eats enormous quantities of his black bread, and whose human intestines are swollen larger than an English race-horse's. When we come to examine the soldier after the review, without his "making up," we are surprised to find how miserable a creature he is—how meagre, narrow-chested, ill-shaped—what a want of muscle, sinew, and elasticity to animate that great body, which reminds one of an over-grown school boy—how different from the healthy cheek, the athletic form, and the symmetrical figure of our own Life Guardsmen. There is scarcely, in these regiments, which are considered as the pride of the imperial army, one man in ten whose shape is not glaringly defective; but this observation does not apply to the regiments of the line, which are composed of men of much inferior stature, and we must, therefore, conclude that these tall men, collected from a people of sixty millions, are rather its monstrosities in point of size than its flower.

In point of fact, the Russians are not a tall race, but the Emperor has been determined to have Guards as tall as those of nations whose stature averages several inches more; and though there has been no difficulty in procuring the number required from the population of his empire, they are overgrown, deformed, or weedy, and such as our picked men would be in England if the standard were raised to 6 feet 3.

In the Polish war the Guards are said to have proved very inferior to the line, which we cannot but attribute to the same cause—a cause which equally affects the cavalry of the Guards, whose efficiency is still diminished by the fact that their horses are still less fitted for arduous service than the men; and yet in the composition of that centaur-thing, in which the man and steed ought to be blended together, the mounted horseman, two-thirds of their joint excellence must depend upon the physical qualities of the brute. On the whole, therefore, when we examine closely this apparently magnificent army—for the Guards alone, which the Emperor reviews in one square of the city of St Petersburg, constitute an army more numerous than any which the British have, within the memory of man, ever collected together on one spot—we are soon convinced that it is more calculated for show than effect.

FUNERAL OF COL TRUMBULL. We copy the following from the New Haven Courier, of yesterday morning:

The remains of this venerable Soldier, Statesman, and Painter, reached this city on Saturday at noon, from New York. Yesterday afternoon the funeral solemnities took place in the College Chapel, and the remains were subsequently placed, like those of the Patriarch Abraham, in the same tomb with his wife "Sarah." The Faculty of College, with the relatives and friends of the deceased, and pall bearers, assembled at the house of Professor Silliman, at half past one o'clock, and proceeded with the corpse to the Chapel. Professor Fitch delivered an appropriate discourse from Gen xxv 8th, 9th, and 10th verses, and then the College choir beautifully performed an anthem.

Professor Fitch gave a brief but faithful sketch of the eventful life of the deceased—of his birth and parentage in Lebanon, in this State, in 1756. He graduated at Cambridge, in 1773, and soon after became aid to Gen Washington, and participated in many important acts of the revolution. He visited Europe several times, where he began some of his great historical productions, after having been a pupil of West. He subsequently contracted with the government to supply the four superb paintings which occupy the pannels in the Rotunda at Washington, for which he received $32,000, or 8,000 for each of them. For many years he devoted himself studiously to his profession, except while acting as Secretary to Mr Jay, during the negociation of his celebrated Treaty.

After his final return from Europe, he conceived the design of establishing a permanent Gallery of Paintings, where all his productions, except those at Washington, could be gathered up and preserved. The proposition was made to Yale College and accepted, that he should receive $1000 annually while living, and at his death, the whole collection should revert to the Institution, the income of it as an exhibition, to be applied to the aid of indigent students, which sum he has received for eleven years. During the last two or three years, he has been residing in New York, prior to which he had been in this city in the family of his distinguished and nearest relative, Prof Silliman. His health has been gradually failing, and last Friday morning he died, in full Christian hope, at the advanced age of 87. Prof Fitch closed his discourse with a beautiful and comprehensive epitaph, such as the proudest heroes as well as the most gifted scholars rarely have engraven on their tombstones.

After the exercises had terminated the corpse, with Judge Hitchcock, Roger S. Baldwin, Captain Goodrich, Ex-Governor Edwards, R. I. Ingersoll, Zebul Bradley, and B. L. Hamlen, as Pall Bearers, was taken through College to Chapel, from Chapel to High street, and from thence to the Trumbull Gallery followed by the mourners, the Faculty of Yale College, Students in the different Departments, and the Undergraduates. Beneath Prof Tyler's Lecture room, a vault was constructed some years since at Col Trumbull's own expense, and the remains of his wife placed there. It is made of brick and covered with a large slab, hereafter to be hermetrically sealed over. By the side of his deceased consort, were then placed the remains of the Scholar, and the Soldier, the distinguished Artist and the courteous and accomplished gentleman, there to slumber under the beautiful mausoleum his genius conceived and his liberality erected, until the earth and sea "give up their dead."

STATE ELECTION. We gave in a postcript yesterday, the return of the votes for Governor in the several Wards of the city. We give the same again with slight corrections. The gain of the Whigs over the Democratic and Liberty Tickets, is 1126.

The entire Whig Senatorial and Representative Ticket for Suffolk is elected.

The editors of the Atlas, with most extraordinary exertions, with the aid of expresses, from all parts of the State, with the facilities of the several railroads, have given their readers this morning returns from a great portion of the State. By these returns it appears that Mr Briggs leads Governrr Morton, over 4000 votes, yet there is no election of Governor by the people, the scattering vote being more than sufficient to over balance that majority.

The returns, as given in the Atlas of this morning are as follows:

THE ANTIQUITY OF SHAVING THE BEARD. It is established that as at the present day in Egypt, so in the most ancient times, it was customary with all the Egyptians to shave their heads, and anciently their faces. According to Prof Rosellini's translation of Isaiah xviii, 1st and 2d verses, the word peeled, "a nation scattered and peeled," meant SHAVED. In the sculptures, few exceptions are met with, these being generally military men, who, in their arduous campaigns, had neither leisure or means of shaving, or else they were persons of the lowest caste of peasantry. Mr Gliddon tells us, that in fact the Egyptians were the only early people of Oriental nations who shaved. With them as with the Arabs, the barber was a dentist and jobbing surgeon. There are several paintings in Egypt representing shaving as well as other parts of the barber's functions. The Jews wore their beards, but it is recorded in Gen xli, 14, that Joseph, when summoned from his dungeon by Pharaoh, "shaved himself." So that the Bible enables us to carry shaving back to 1800 years B. C, whilst the sculptures in the tombs round the pyramids, prove its universal use in Egypt several centuries before that date.

LOSS OF THE PACKET SHIP SHEFFIELD. The packet ship Sheffield, Capt Popham, from Liverpool for New York, was lost on Romer Shoals on Saturday afternoon, during a heavy gale from East South East. The Sheffield was one of Mr Kermit's line, and had a valuable cargo. There were 13 cabin and 93 steerage passengers, all of whom were saved, after having been in a most perilous situation for fourteen hours. Mr Brooks, of the Express, was one of the passengers.

The agents of the underwriters have despatched lighters with the steam pump, &c, to her assistance.

The cargo of the Sheffield is valued at over $100,000, and the ship at $25,000. She is insured at the various offices in Wall street for $6,000 on the cargo. The principal part of the cargo is insured in England. [New York Commercial.

The Commercial of yesterday, under date of 1 P. M, says: "The lighter Alice Elice, Roff, has just come up from the Sheffield. She left at half past 11, this forenoon, at which hour, the water was up with the comings of the hatches. She has brought up the anchors, chains, &c. None of the cargo has been got out, owing to the high wind, and the position of the ship."

TRUE—EVERY WORD OF IT! Mr Holden, of the Philadelphia Saturday Courier, in the last number of his "Letters about Boston and its Environs," pays the following deserved compliment to the Pavilion and its landlords: "Although the Pavilion is not one of the largest public houses in the country, it is indisputably one of the best. There is no avocation in this life, in the exercise of which there is more constant demand for gentlemanly conduct, than in the duties of keeper of a public house. Our much esteemed friends, Messrs Lefavor and Fish, are gentlemen. They have been well educated; and, knowing how to deport themselves, they know equally well how to behave in their business relations to the guests who are fortunate enough to stay at their Pavilion. This is no puff, but the honest truth." Mr Holden also speaks of "Michael, the younger," as the "excellent genius of the Pavilion."

MR MACREADY attracted a crowded and fashionable audience at the National last night, and his impersonation of the character of Macbeth is spoken of in terms of admiration by those who witnessed it. By the way—being in the house two or three minutes, we noticed, amidst the brilliant array of beauty and talent that graced the dress circle, MISS CHARLOTTE CUSHMAN—one of the most (if not the most) gifted of the tragic actresses that America has yet produced. What a rich histrionic treat it would be to witness Mr Macready and Miss Cushman as the representatives of Shakespeare's heroes and heroines—after seeing Mr M. and Mrs Anderson (who is said to have acquitted herself last night in the arduous character of Lady Macbeth, in a most superior manner) in the same round of characters!

The heads as follows: Fallacies of the ancients in regard to them. Illusions of the moderns. Causes and consequences of these errors. The epochs, the builders, and the objects of the Pyramids, as determined in 1843, by the HIEROLOGISTS. Former opinions superseded by present facts. Sketch of explorations at the Pyramids, since 1800. Works published and forthcoming. The Memphite Necropolis, and the Pyramids, explained topographically and architecturally—with Diagrams, Plans, Sections, Views, &c, &c.

COLD WEATHER. On Sunday night, ice was formed in this vicinity thick enough to skate upon. It is worthy of remark, that while snow has fallen in the southern part of Tennessee, in the south and southwest, and at the north and northwest enough to make sleighing several weeks since, we have as yet had but a sprinkling hereabout. In Baltimore they have had more snow than in Boston. [Post.

We had another slight sprinkling of snow last night—just about enough to give Mother Earth the appearance, this morning, of having received a severe visitation from Jack Frost.

MECHANIC APPRENTICES' LIBRARY ASSOCIATION. The Rev O. A. Brownson delivers an address before our young friends, the Mechanic Apprentices, this evening, at their hall in Phillips's place, commencing at 7½ o'clock. The friends of the Association are expected to be present on the occasion.

THE MUSEUM. "Love, Law, and Lobsters," and "Deaf as a Post," were both capitally played last night; and Mr Thompson's "Sailor's Hornpipe" and "Irish Jig" were first rate. Miss Gannon's "Cachucha," ditto.

FIRING THE WRONG WAY. The New York Commercial, of last evening, says: "We have the 'first gun' from Michigan, by Pomeroy's express, and we wish it had been fired the other way."

The Rev Mr Towne, pastor of the Salem street Congregational Church, in this city, has declined the invitation of the Pearl street Presbyterian Church, of New York.

SUPREME JUDICIAL COURT. The November term of the Supreme Judicial Court, for the County of Suffolk, commenced in this city this morning, at ten o'clock. Hon Judge Hubbard presides. The Grand and Traveree Jurors, new draft, were empannelled. Prayer was offered by Rev Mr Stow, of the second Baptist Church, in Baldwin Place.

An express arrived in this city yesterday, with letters to S. S. Lewis Esq, agent of the mail steamers, and to Capt Hewitt of the Britannia, advising of the loss, in the river St Lawrence, of the transport Premier, off Cape Chat. She had on board a regiment of British troops, numbering with their wives and children, 300, all of whom were saved.

☞ GENERAL PRINTING HOUSE. ☜

DUTTON & WENTWORTH have the satisfaction of informing their friends and the public, that they have received from London, by the most recent arrivals of the Cunard Steamers, an extensive variety of the most MODERN STYLES of FANCY PRINTING MATERIALS, consisting, in part, of MATHEMATICAL COMBINATIONS, with appropriate ORNAMENTS to match; and TYPES of the most exquisite designs and finish. The CUMBINATIONS are most curious for the endless variety of patterns and dimensions they are capable of being formed into.—The ORNAMENTS, consist of Birds, Fountains, Flowers, Fruits, Vines, Vases, Urns, &c., and when arranged, (in good taste) with the Combinations, they form a class of BORDERS and ORNAMENTS, which, for beauty and order, surpass all other designs, for Letter-Press Printing, heretofore manufactured. The TYPES are of exquisite cut & finish, resembling letters engraved for Copperplate Printing, of which there is a great variety.

☞ The above were selected with great care and good taste, and as a whole, form a galaxy of Materials, capable of producing the most beautiful and extensive variety of Letter-press Printing ever executed in this country.

EVENING TRANSCRIPT.

TUESDAY EVENING, NOV 14

Human Life has many phases. Here is one of of the not least singular, a marriage among the English Aristocracy. It is described with spirit in the London Morning Post, as follows:

Marriage in High Life. The marriage of Lady Evelyn Leveson Gower, second daughter of the Duke and Duchess of Sutherland, and Lord Balantyre, was solemnized at Trentham on Wednesday. The Archbishop of York, Viscount Morpeth, Lord and Lady F. Egerton, Viscount Clifden, Dowager Lady Cawdor, Right Hon T. Granville, Viscount and Viscountess Levesen, Hon and Rev Francis and Lady Elizabeth Grey, Hon W. S Lascelles and Lady Caroline, Lord Edward Howard, Mr Vernon Harcourt, and Miss Georgina Harcourt, and a large circle, had assembled at the princely seat of the noble duke on the previously, in order to be present. About 70 of the North Stafford Yeomanry Cavalry assembled early in the morning. It was the same that, during the disturbances last summer in the Potteries, contributed to the preservation of life and property in that district. After partaking of a dejeuner, that entire troop was mustered, and proceeded to the church, where they occupied the right aisle, by which the wedding party passed to and from the communion table. At twenty minutes to twelve the Archbishop of York entered the church. Shortly the Duke of Sutherland came, leading the bride to the altar, and in the rear were Lord Balantyre, the Duchess of Sutherland, and bridal party. In the train of the bride were the Ladies Elizabeth, Caroline, and Constance Leveson Gower, sisters of the bride; and Lady Mary Howarc, Miss Lascelles, and Miss Howard, daughter of the Dean of Litchfield, who acted as bridemaids.

The bride was attired in a remarkably rich but chaste costume of white satin, with two valuable flounces of guipure lace, the flounces covering the whole of the skirt, which was trimmed with orange blossoms. Her ladyship had a shawl of lace of exquisite manafacture, and a superb veil; head-dress of white roses. All the bridemaids wore dresses of India muslin over white satin, with blonde bonnets trimmed with white roses.

The body of the church was crowded with the gentry of the neighborhood, and in the galleries were most of the domestic establishment of the Duke of Sutherland. The Archbishop performed the ceremony. Immediately after the solemnization of the marriage, the bride and bridegroom proceeded to the family mansion. Twenty-four children from the local school maintained by the Duchess, all in white, strewed the path of the youthful bride and bridegroom with flowers as they passed from the church. All the visitors staying at Trentham were present at the church. The parish church at which the ceremony was performed has recently been restored and enlarged, under the direction of Mr Barry, and it was opened, for the first time since its restoration, on this occasion. At half-past one Lord and Lady Blantyre left Trentham for Lilleshall, the Duke of Sutherland's seat in Shropshire, escorted by a body of the Staffordshire, escorted by a body of the Staffordshire Yeomanry Cavalry. At Eccleshall the bride and bridegroom were met by a troop of the Shropshire Yeomanry, who escorted them to Lilleshall. On leaving the park for Lilleshall the happy pair were loudly cheered by the thousands of persons collected in the demesne. The Duke and Duchess, after the departure of Lord and Lady Blantyre, gave a sumptuous déjeuné to a numerous circle. Covers were laid for fifty. The gateau de noces was greatly admired for taste of its ornaments and its vast size. In the evening the Duke and Duchess had a distinguished circle at dinner. There was a ball at night for the household, and the laborers on the duke's estate were bountifully regaled with excellent old English fare, and strong ale was supplied to the whole of them, in which, it is almost needless to say, they pledged the health and happiness of the bride and bridegroom, and did all honors to the ducal house of Sutherland.

ANOTHER VETERAN JERSEY BLUE. Died near Elizabethtown on the 16th of October last, Elder James Wilcox, aged 80 years. When he was 13 years and six months old, he enlisted in the time of the revolution for three years; after his term of service had expired, he served in the military two years, making five years' service in the war. He was in the battle at Germantown, Pa, which took place October 4th, 1775—the Americans lost in this battle 200 killed, 600 wounded, 400 taken prisoners; he was also in the battle of Trenton, and several skirmishes during the war. Very often was he obliged to lay on the bare ground, with no other covering but the canopy of the heavens; sometimes without sefficient clothing, often hungry, then suffering from the cold and great fatigue. He took a cold while in the army that settled on his lungs, which gave him the asthma, from which he was much afflicted the remainder of his life. About two years after the cessation of hostilities between this and the mother country, it pleased God to call him to engage in the cause of Christ, which by his life he proved beyond a question. He first united with the first Presbyterian Church in Elizabethtown in the year 1786, and continued his membership with that body seven years, after which he united with the Baptist Church at Lyons Farms under the care of Elder Bryant, and in 1808 became his successor as Pastor of the Church, which continued 13 years. He was elected twice a member of the Legislature, and was often called upon to officiate in public [Elazabeth Journal.

REBECCA IN 1727. "About the latter end of February, 1726-7, a petition was sent to Parliament complaining of the badness of the roads about this city (Bristol) and praying relief, and provision for keeping them in good repair. In consequence of this, an Act of Parliament, 13 Geo 1, 1727, was obtained, and turnpikes were first erected here about Midsummer, and tolls collected for many days. But the country people showed a violent hostility to the measure, and great disturbances ensued, and the gates were soon cut down and demolished, chiefly by the colliers, who would not sufier coal to be brought here, whereupon the Mayor had the city supplied from Swansea, which, when the colliers perceived, this brought their coals as usual. Soldiers assisted at the gates to take the toll, but the next night, after the soldiers were withdrawn, the gates were all cut down a second time, by persons disguised in women's apparel, and high crowned hats." [Memoirs of Bristol and its Neighborhood, by the Rev Samuel Seyer, Bristol. London, 1823, 4to, vol 2, p 575.

HINT TO FARMERS. We do not know whether or not the following plan has been adopted by many farmers, but there can be no harm in calling their attention to the circumstance. A farmer in this neighborhood has, for some time past, put garlic in the bottom of his grain stacks, and since he has adopted that plan has never been troubled with vermin. Before adopting this plan, on taking down a stack of grain, the assistants never killed less than from fifteen to twenty rats, and above 100 mice. This is a very simple, cheap and effective method of preserving grain in stacks. [Paisley Advertiser.

NO 2. "OAK HALL." BY ONE OF ITS PATRONS

Webster we place the foremost among men
With fame so great, his foes dare not condemn;
His mighty mind and legislative skill
All must admire, view him how they will;
There is another man less known to fame
Who yet has earned an enviable name;
The patient zeal he ever has displayed
Proclaims him now "the Webster of his trade!"
That noble building which he named "Oak Hall"
Rose from the Earth like magic at his call;
But though its splendors may our notice win
Its chief attractions can be found within!
"Oak Hall" may charm us! Yet we all confess
That Simmons's skill is most displayed in dress;
All classes here are clothed! the meek and vain
Yet all are pleased; and none did e'er complain;
While Webster lives an honor to his race
With well earned fame that foremost takes its place
The world still owns that one approaches DAN
And candor points at SIMMONS as the man.

IMPROVED SAFETY-VALVE AIR-TIGHT STOVES. These Stoves are constructed of the best materials and workmanship of four sizes. On each size there are the Pyramid, the Ornamental and the Plain. To each is appended Mears's improved safety-valve, which is at once ornamental and highly useful, entirely precluding the possibility of escape of smoke or gas during the ordinary process of combustion; but on the generating of an explosive gas, the valve instantly rises and presents an aperture five inches in diameter for its escape; after which it inevitably resumes its position as perfect as before, not being liable to be thrown from its seat, and thus, by the admission of a current of air, hasten the combustion of the fuel and fill the room with smoke during the night, or otherwise.

Also, the improved ARNOTT or COAL AIR-TIGHT, with internal columns for the circulation of heated air, which, for convenience, comfort and economy, is not surpassed by any Stove yet before the public; together with an extensive assortment of the most approved coal and wood COOKING STOVES. Manufactured and for sale at lowest prices by D. PROUTY & CO,

In the article of linen or cotton apparel, silk and cotton stockings, table linen, &c, this cannot be better effected than by marking such property with CLARKE'S INDELIBLE PERMANENT INK, which from a test of 56 years, is found to be an improvement on the common durable, or permanent Ink, and much superior to any of those Inks which are used without a preparation.
