

GRACE GREENWOOD—The National Era announces that it has secured the services of Miss Sarah Jane Clark (Grace Greenwood) exclusively for that paper. We rejoice that Grace has at length fallen into her appropriate sphere. She is one of the most talented women in the land. She writes most excellent sketchy letters, which have chiefly made her reputation, but better stories, and still better poetry. Her principles are perfectly in harmony with the National Era, and she will work with pen, hand, and heart in unison in that position. The Era will have one more feature of attraction added to it by this arrangement.—Western (Chicago) Citizen.
